SERENGETI SAFARI CAMP

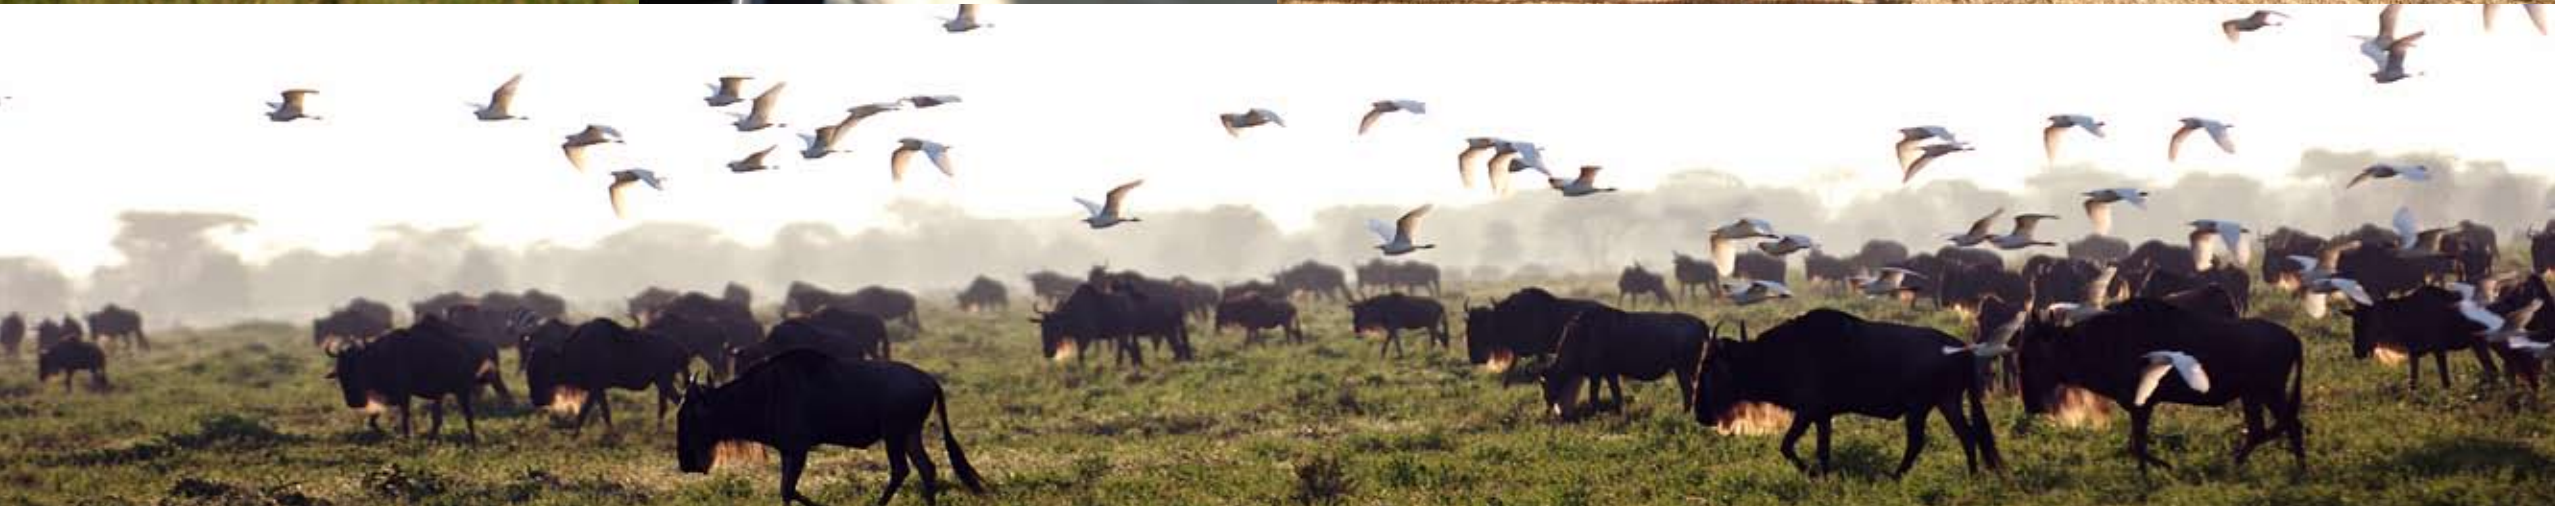

Though the Serengeti park boundaries officially define the Serengeti, the ecosystem goes way beyond these limits; we call this the Greater Serengeti. It's a giant picture of wild Tanzania – masses of animals, contrasting landforms, and tribal peoples. We roam around the lot in true nomad fashion.

Serengeti Safari Camp is semi-nomadic – it won't move while you're there – but it's actually on a wide orbit shadowing the migration: so you, your Tanzanian driver/guide, and your private four-wheel drive vehicle are as close to a million wildebeest as possible.

Whilst you can head off from dawn to dusk on your own expeditions, the small wandering camp is sociable because it's shared – with guests staying in classic bush style. Each of the six luxury bed tents sit alone on a beautiful patch of Africa; light in their footprint, but with all the comforts anyone could need, and only a stroll away from the candlelit mess for some safari bonhomie.

Serengeti Safari Camp travels within the Serengeti National Park and surrounding area, where densities of animals are mostly higher, and the chance of seeing large predators is much greater. It's the base for exciting game drives – conquering the landscapes and absorbing the sheer hugeness of it all. Daily adventures are yours to plan with your own private guide to take you into its midst. This is the classic East African safari.
